'The Warrants Division of All Law Enforcement Departments' Serving Papers is Deadly; These Officers Need More Than Paper Protection!

Doing your job has become deadlier than ever!

Frontline law enforcement officers who complete traffic stops, answer 'calls for service' and serve court papers are stepping into the unknown and should not be placed in this position!

This is the technology information age and so many police agencies, departments and governments have delayed and procrastinated over the move to the digital age, which is causing so many issues, including placing officers in lethal positions.

The serving of papers is both civil and criminal in nature and must be both viewed as more than dangerous today. You have no idea who is behind the door that you knock on or office building you visit. The 'Warrants Division' was looked at as a lushy number for officers nearing retirement and did not have to deal with other forms of policing and crime. It is NOT!

The public believe that all law enforcement talks with each other and share information and are so sophisticated they are as good as they see in the movies or on television.

You and I know so differently, but you, it seems, don't know what we know!

Criminals are sharp, but not that sharp; they know how to play the police intelligence system when it comes to the lack of shared information from one department, state, county and agency to another.

Case in point, underage prostitution, which is a traveling disgusting circus when it comes to actually catching the purveyors of child abuse and human trafficking. They set up in a city knowing they have at least three days before law enforcement becomes wise to their illegal business. They get visited and might get a court date. What the local law enforcement does not know is that they have been exploiting these children three counties away for many months and just moving on each time they are caught. Then, they are gone again.

LENS

Law Enforcement Network Sharing Solution

There is so much information on the local investigation that could have been collected simply, data, photographs and unique identifiers that connect all. This can simply be collected via LENS (Law Enforcement Network Sharing Solution) platform, which has been proven since its inception as a proprietary/patented policing tool five years ago. It has been in full use for three and a half years and now, is affordable and available globally.

Lack of street-level information which is shared across borders and agencies is vital in this day and age. Police officers require this ability to be forewarned before setting foot on unknown properties and confronting individuals that you have limited or base information on.

Shreveport, Louisiana sadly lost an officer who had no idea that the house he was called to for a 'call for service' on loud music, housed a wanted murderer. He arrived and confronted the individual on the 'loud music' concern, he entered the house and did not leave. He was killed by the individual because he did not have relevant information to warn him on this individual. This can and is being prevented!

The actions of sheriff deputies and police officers on the streets are the beginning of the information chain. They see and hear the initial incidents and subsequent conversations with the individuals. You cannot get closer to the facts than our law enforcement 'boots on the ground.' In notating within LENS and not just robotically checking boxes, they are building an information flow with unique identifiers for all their fellow officers across borders, counties, and agencies.

You do not have to write a book; it is just short words, sentences, and phrases that become searchable for all. Law enforcement officers at all levels are trained and have 'soft skill sets' that are based on gut feelings. Those must be noted, as they may and will play an important part in a further or a connected investigation down the road.

It is those unique identifiers such as, vehicle tag, driving license number, type of vehicle, passenger or passengers, location, time, and the reason for a traffic stop that just like a field interview or 'call for service' highlight time-based facts and statements that must be noted. There is the difference and been proven over and over again in the use of LENS.

There is categorically no solution on the global, nationally or on a local basis that can share across borders and agencies in the manner of LENS. It is the law enforcement game changer and can be assimilated as productive 'Policing on Steroids.'

Make an appointment; we will visit in person, converse and demonstrate the solution.
